

AI marketing agent—2

- ? 1. What do marketing agencies produce?
- ? 2. What people are involved in the production of products/services of a marketing agency?
- ? 3. What degree of contributions do these people make?
- ? 4. What skills do these people possess and how do they overlap?
- ? 5. What kind of customer do marketing agencies have?
- ? 6. What is the audience of their product/service?

Here are clear answers to each question, using the provided sources where applicable.

1. What do marketing agencies produce?

- Strategy and research: ICPs/buyer research, messaging and positioning, channel plans, test plans, and measurement frameworks .
ironpaper.com
- Campaigns and media: Demand gen and ABM campaigns (e.g., paid search, LinkedIn, industry publications), as well as traditional/digital media buys across TV, radio, billboards, influencers, and digital takeovers ironpaper.com +1 .
- Content and creative: Thematic content (solution sheets, trend reports, case/"transformation" stories, maturity guides), brand and visual concepts, UX design ironpaper.com +1 .
- Digital products/experiences: Websites, mobile apps, and interactive experiences .

setup.us

- Sales enablement: Assets and guidance aligned to buyer questions and objections .

ironpaper.com

- Analytics and optimization: Reporting, insight generation, and continuous testing/optimization ironpaper.com +1 .

1. What people are involved in the production?

- Account management and planning: Account Directors, Account Supervisors, Account Planners—client liaison and strategic guidance .

setup.us

- Creative: Copywriters, Designers, Art/Creative Directors, UX/UI Designers, Information Architects, Experience Directors—translate strategy into assets and experiences .

setup.us

- Media: Media Planners/Buyers, Media Directors, Digital Marketing Managers—plan and execute placements across channels .

setup.us

- Technology and analytics: Developers, Engineers, Email Marketing Managers, Marketing Research Managers, Analysts—build digital products and extract insights from data .

setup.us

- Operations/project management: Project Managers, Operations Managers, Delivery leaders—manage timelines, budgets, and resources .

setup.us

- For B2B programs specifically: Demand gen and ABM practitioners, content strategists, and sales enablement specialists (often part of the teams above) .

ironpaper.com

1. What degree of contributions do these people make?

- It varies by engagement and phase. Typically: discovery and strategy are led by account planning/strategy with input from analytics; creative and technology lead production of assets and digital experiences; media leads distribution; analytics leads measurement and optimization; account management and operations coordinate across all phases setup.us +1 . The exact weighting depends on scope (e.g., a site build skews to tech/UX; a paid program skews to media/analytics).

1. What skills do these people possess and how do they overlap?

- Account management: Strategic advising, problem solving, analytical thinking, strong communication/translation of briefs .

setup.us

- Business development (agency growth): Communication, relationship-building, strategic understanding of capabilities (less involved in delivery, more in sales) .

setup.us

- Creative: Artistic and conceptual skills, persuasion, cultural awareness, deep marketing understanding; ability to iterate and align to business objectives .

setup.us

- Media: Strategic planning, creative thinking, communication, strong grasp of industry and digital trends; closely collaborates with creative and shares similar qualities .

setup.us

- Technology and analytics: Software development/engineering, email and web tech, data analysis, database/integrated channel marketing; tools like Google Analytics, Adobe, Salesforce, IBM .

setup.us

- Overlaps: Communication and strategic thinking span account, creative, and media; analytical skills span account, media, and analytics; marketing acumen is foundational across teams .

setup.us

1. What kind of customer do marketing agencies have?

- B2B agencies serve companies that sell to other businesses, often with complex buying committees and long cycles (e.g., tech, services, industrial) .
ironpaper.com
- More broadly (beyond the provided sources), agencies also serve B2C brands and organizations of all sizes—from startups and small businesses to mid-market and enterprises—depending on the agency's specialization and focus.

1. What is the audience of their product/service?

- For B2B programs: Buying committees and decision-makers at target accounts; sales teams are also internal audiences for sales enablement outputs .
ironpaper.com
- For consumer-focused campaigns: End consumers reached via channels like TV, radio, out-of-home, influencers, and digital placements .
setup.us